Friday, August 8, 2016 The Craziest Movie Cakes of 2016 So Far If you follow me on Instagram, you know I'm not a huge fan of movies. But the internet has since turned me on to them. After seeing How To Be Single, I've been excited for some new movie marathons. Here's what I've been into lately. The Huntsman: Winter's War I'd like to be friends with Charlize Theron. The original installment of The Huntsman franchise was terrible. I think I liked the sequel a lot more. The Prince of Persia and the much more recent The Great Gatsby are fun to watch, too. Joker A classic. When I first saw Joker, I thought, 'This is the worst movie ever'. It was dark and violent and had a child actor. Why am I watching this? But I also thought the moment the Joker got his hands on that famous clown mask was perfect. The film was awful, but it was so much fun to watch. Kong: Skull Island A dinosaur movie. Yes, yes it is. I didn't like Godzilla: King of the Monsters (although it had my favorite Japanese actress, Millie Bobby Brown), and I didn't think Pacific Rim was very good, but I'll have to see Kong: Skull Island, even if I'm not crazy about it. The Discovery The eight episode British science-fiction series is okay. I'm not a huge fan of the show, but I liked it enough to want to see what else there was. The Hateful Eight I saw The Hateful Eight at a friend's house. She said, 'You should watch it, it's good'. I watched it. The final act, as I expected, was too much, and I was disappointed. Maybe I should watch the whole thing? The Lego Batman Movie Lego Batman movies are always fun. I don't like The Lego Movie, and I was a little disappointed with The Lego Batman Movie. It was more dark, and the plot seemed not particularly strong. Stuber Travis Bickle meets John Wick. I wasn't very interested in the new Keanu Reeves movie, Stuber. But it has Samuel L. Jackson and more than a few other awesome names, including John Malkovich. So I
