Oct 23, 2019 Timeline .Q: .NET REST Web API Static Member Fields from SQL Server using Active Record I am trying to query SQL Server from a .NET application using the Active Record Pattern. I have been looking through the .NET REST API documentation for an example. What I want to be able to do is to query the current date with REST API. What I have tried is: WebApiConfig.cs public static class WebApiConfig { public static IConfiguration GetConfig() { return new IConfiguration(); } } DefaultController.cs public class DefaultController : ApiController { public string Get() { return string.Format("The current date is: {0}", DateTime.Now.ToString()); } } This is working for me, but I want to be able to use an active record pattern to get a different field from my SQL Server. So for example instead of having: select 'Current Date' = cast(getdate() as date) I would like to be able to use something like: select 'Current Date' = cast(Get() as date) This is what I was hoping that the REST API would help me do with the next example. The date query above should be working for me because I am using 'Get' to return the value. The following code is not working. I get the error: Could not load type 'DNR.MyRepo' from assembly 'MyRepo, Version=1.0.0.0, Culture=neutral, PublicKeyToken=null' DefaultController.cs public class DefaultController : ApiController { public DateTime Get() { DateTime d = DateTime.Today; return d; } } I am wondering what Active Record Pattern in SQL Server is or how to use.
