The 1988 Colorado inmate population was surveyed to determine the prevalence of illicit drug use and the relationship between the use of drugs and other factors. Of the 1,270 inmates surveyed, 51% used at least one illicit drug in the preceding six months. Cigarette smoking, alcohol use, and cocaine use were related to the use of illicit drugs, whereas injection drug use was not. The other factors assessed, gender, race, employment status, grade at school, and previous drug treatment, were not associated with illicit drug use. Nevertheless, inmates who had been previously exposed to drug treatment were less likely to use illicit drugs than were those who had not been exposed to treatment.Q: What's the difference between using a maven-cargo
