A survey of spleen size, ultrasonography, liver function tests, and schistosome circulating anodic antigen (CAA) has been conducted in adults with splenomegaly in Khartoum (n = 104), Eastern Sudan, and in a similar survey in three areas of Central Sudan. Hepatosplenomegaly was found in 46% (95% confidence interval [CI]: 38%-53%) of the patients, and hepatomegaly in 58% (95% CI: 50%-66%). Ultrasonographic changes indicative of hepatic cirrhosis were detected in 26% (95% CI: 17%-36%) of the patients. This is the first report on the prevalence of hepatosplenic schistosomiasis in Sudan, where previous surveys have included mainly hepatomegaly, and confirm that the disease is not uncommon in this area of Sudan, causing considerable morbidity.1. Field of the Invention The invention relates to a system and method for cross-certifying a visitor location register at the border of two countries. More particularly, the invention relates to a system and method for automatically cross-certifying a visitor location register at the border of two countries to prevent border crossing by criminals. 2. Description of the Related Art Many criminals cross national borders to enter countries and commit crimes. Such cross-border criminal activities have caused many border crossings. Criminals often enter countries by crossing a border between two countries. For example, a criminal may jump a border fence or walk across a border during off-hours, like at night or early morning, when border patrols are often asleep. Another technique for a criminal to enter a
