KeyMacro works with any computer running Microsoft Windows 2000, 2000, XP, Vista, Windows 7, and 8.0. It will help you create macro programs for Windows by recording your actions and automatically repeating them. KeyMacro can also be used to change or create macros for any of your applications. You can create your own custom macros, choose from hundreds of pre-made macros, and can store your macros in any of the supported file formats. KeyMacro allows you to create macros for all Windows based applications using a mouse or a keyboard. It features an intuitive user interface and a revolutionary functionality. Press Alt+Enter, click on Macro and you'll be ready to record the event that you want to create a macro for.

Simply create the macro by pressing Alt+Enter again. The next time you press Alt+Enter, the application will record your actions on screen and store them in your macro. KeyMacro supports three ways of recording.

You can record the mouse movement, keyboard presses, and menu commands. The macros you record can be created in two ways. The first way is by clicking on the Macro button and manually entering the information for the macro. The second way is by pressing the Hotkey button and then choosing what actions should be performed. For example, you can set a key combination (W, S, A, or D) to a macro that will apply itself each time the key combination is pressed. You can also combine the Hotkey and Macro buttons to create more complex macros.

This way of using KeyMacro is intuitive and yet very powerful. You can create macros for your applications in just a couple of clicks and save them in any of the supported formats. KeyMacro will then store your macros on your computer in a text file. You can edit the macros you've created, delete old macros, or add new ones to the application. KeyMacro uses an intelligent algorithm to find all the recorded macros and link them to the application that is being used. It keeps track of all the macros you have recorded and links them to the application. If you change the application the macro is linked to, the algorithm recognizes the change and re-maps the macros to the new application. The macros are linked to the application, which means that if you record a macro that was created for an application, you will be able to use the macro again and again on any other Windows based application. KeyMacro recognizes the changes to the macros and re-links them to the new application.
