Using Tracks The first tool we will discuss for nonlinear editing is tracks. Normally, when a song or video is imported into your project, it is placed in its own layer with tracks. However, if you want to simply place the audio and video on separate layers with track markers and no prerecorded audio or video, you can simply add the audio and video layers to your composition by choosing Insert⇒Audio Tracks or Insert⇒Video Tracks. The new layers will have a yellow arrow on top of the white workspace in the New Layer dialog box and have a green menu in the lower right corner of the layer properties (see Figure 8-4). Figure 8-4 Inserting multiple tracks. You can control the audio with the default controls at the top of the layer property windows, but the video section of the property window is currently disabled. You can see this in Figure 8-4, bottom. You can change the audio to real time, import audio, or insert your own audio track by right-clicking the Yellow Arrow tool and selecting Change Playback. You can insert or replace the video layer in the same way and control it by right-clicking the Green Menu tool in the lower-right corner of the layer properties (see Figure 8-5). Figure 8-5 Right-clicking the green menu tool in the lower-right corner of the video layer properties lets you control the video or insert a different video track.

What are the Core Features of Photoshop? At a glance, it looks like Adobe Photoshop consists of only 2 features: 1) Photoshop (which is the image editor), and 2) Photoshop Elements (which is the graphics editor). What's not mentioned is that it also has the Adobe Bridge (Which is the management software for your images), which is not present in Photoshop Elements. Photoshop and Photoshop Elements are closely related (just with less features), the two are thought of as separate tools. They are different applications, and they have their respective Photoshop features and Photoshop Elements features. They are simply separate applications that have been bundled together and made easier to work with. In the above example, Photoshop Elements is a newer version, designed to be an alternative to the more expensive and complex Photoshop. And Photoshop is the older version, which is more powerful, capable and advanced than Photoshop Elements. Both have their place, and we'll get to that later. What Are Photoshop's Features? Photoshop offers a wide range of features to make working with images easier and more effective. Some of these features are: Effects: Photoshop has built-in effects that you can apply to photos to create visually unique images. Q: use of default enum values I was reading a blog entry here about using default values for enums. So I made the following enum: `public enum IdStringEnum{ ID_DEFAULT, ID_GENERATED_BY_METHOD, ID_USER_DEFINED, //this is where I'm running into problems ID_USER_DEFINED_UNIQUE_ID(10); private int id; private int uniqID; private IdStringEnum(int id, int uniqID){ this.id = id; this.uniqID = uniqID; } public int getId(){ return this.id; } public int getUniqID(){ return this.uniqID; } }` but because this enum has not value associated with ID_USER_DEFINED, we will always get ID_DEFAULT, or even an exception? How am I going to be able to get a unique ID for my database? A: That's the point of default values - to give you a default value when you create the enum, and let you override it when you create the enum. For example: `public enum IdStringEnum { ID_DEFAULT, ID_GENERATED_BY_METHOD, ID_USER_DEFINED, ID_USER_DEFINED_UNIQUE_ID(10); // no default value, like in your code private int id; private int uniqID; private IdStringEnum(int id, int uniqID) { this.id = id; this.uniqID = uniqID; } // public static methods, of course public static IdStringEnum generateEnum()`

Q: Writing array output to text file I want to write array values to a text file, example: `function zzzzz() { array_add($a, 1); array_add($b, 2); array_add($c, 3); array_add($d, 4); array_add($e, 5); }` how to write the values of array to a file? A: `output_file_append()` is what you are looking for. We need to talk about how the president and his administration are treating families seeking asylum in our country. When I was a kid growing up in Pittsburgh, there was a story I heard about the famous steelworkers who came from Ukraine and other Eastern European countries to help build America's industrial base. It became a sort of ballad about their courage and hard work, and I remember being struck by its simple beauty and meaning. In some ways it is a uniquely American tradition. Advertisement: But what I just witnessed these past few days was a display of hypocrisy that I would have expected of those blue-collar steelworkers who poured into this country nearly a century ago. Border Patrol agents were on their knees, begging children to line up in the sand. There were tearful parents at the border, hoping to be granted asylum. The children had already been kept in cages for weeks; one mother with four children kept in a cage for four weeks is now being prosecuted for a misdemeanor, and will have to fight the charges she made up at her hearing. Once the children are taken into custody, they are all supposed to be given lawyers and then at some point in the coming weeks they get a "hearing" to try to get asylum. Advertisement: But in this case, one entire hearing has been already been canceled. The children were told they needed to stay in a holding facility for a few more weeks. And not only was the entire trip from Central America postponed, the children will have to wait in overcrowded holding centers for at least another month while the administration puts together a massive attempt to build a wall. Children are being forced into concentration camps – or, at the very least, they are facing being in crowded and squalid conditions for what should be a relatively short time. The children were told
