The SSH key is stored on a network share. I have written a script, which connects to this network share, uses the keys to authenticate, and then uses the keys to log into the remote machine. This script and keys are installed on many different machines for the same user. I'm running into problems when new machines are installed and old ones are removed. The new machine installs the new keys but also removes the old ones. With the old keys removed, the remote machine fails to recognize the new
