Basketball Hall of Fame The National Basketball Association, more commonly known as the NBA, is the primary professional men's basketball league in the United States and Canada. The league was formed in 1946, and has since grown in popularity to become one of the world's most popular sporting leagues. The NBA is made up of 30 franchises, which are geographically allocated into divisions based on the location of their arenas. The NBA was the first North American sports league to become a highly profitable enterprise, and in the 2000s, the league's profits were greater than those of the National Football League, Major League Baseball and National Hockey League combined. At present, the NBA is the largest men's professional sports league in the world, with a total of 30 franchises. Since the league's founding, the Chicago Bulls have won the most titles, with 18 championships. The Boston Celtics are the most successful franchise in the history of the NBA, having won 14 championships. The Basketball Hall of Fame, officially titled the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame, is a multi-purpose indoor sports museum in Springfield, Massachusetts, United States. The Hall was inaugurated in Springfield in 1963, and opened in 1966. It is administered by the

Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame Association, which is also based in Springfield. The NBA has a similar museum in Charlotte, North Carolina. Over the years, the NBA has received criticism for its lack of black professional athletes. However, the league was founded by the businessmen Bill Russell, Walter Brown and Dr. James Naismith, who were all black. The first five NBA MVP Awards have gone to black men and the league was originally based in New York City. Since its founding, the NBA has grown in popularity, and in the 1970s and 1980s it gained more popularity than the National Football League. In 1991, the league changed its name to the National Basketball Association. The Hall of Fame has six divisions: Springfield, International, Great NBA Players, Surpassing the Dream, One Last Season and Legend. In each division, the committees determine if a player's accomplishments in the league are worthy of induction into the Hall. Induction into the Hall of Fame is an honor that is not automatic, but it must be earned. Many of the Hall's inductees are basketball legends. Some of the most influential NBA players and coaches, including Magic Johnson, Larry Bird, Phil Jackson, Scottie Pipp
