Tanzania's National Park is a paradise for giant animal and bird species. In Serengeti National Park alone, there exist nearly two million wildebeests and zebras that migrate through ancient trails, including lions, cheetahs, leopards, hyenas, and jackals.

Other important wildlife areas include the beautiful-Lake Manyara National Park & Tarangire National Park. These are two different wildlife environments. There is an existence of grassy floodplains and groundwater forests around Lake Manyara. Inhabited by many hippos and tree-climbing lions, it is regarded as a paradise for birdlife.

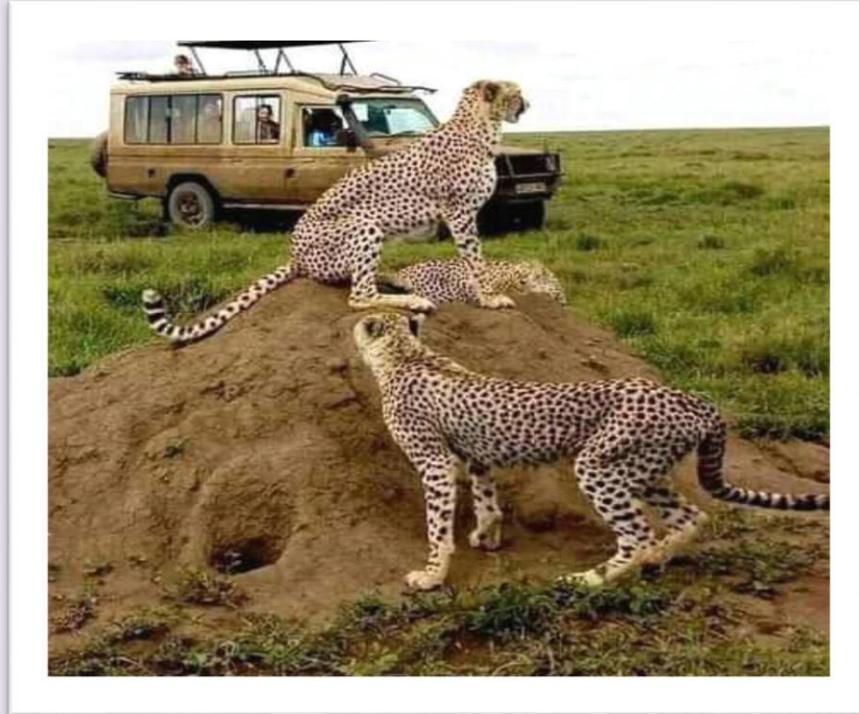

Tarangire National Park is known for its hordes of elephants, mysterious baobab trees, and bright red soil. When it comes to western borders, it stretches between the Mahale Mountains and Lake Tanganyika; it offers some of the largest populations of wild chimpanzees in Africa, just a breath-taking experience to watch them.

The famous Ngorongoro Crater is a vast volcanic caldera with 25,000 animals living in a unique environment.
